THE SOUTH CAROLINA
CORPS OF CADETS

WELCOME TO THE CITADEL

The Guidon is published every year as a source of information for fourth class cadets. Some is for your familiarization and situational awareness and other parts are required pieces of knowledge. All of it is useful and designed to help you be successful. Cadet recruits are encouraged to begin studying The Guidon before arriving at The Citadel.

The Guidon consists of three parts: general information that will help a cadet recruit become acclimated to The Citadel campus and lifestyle, required fourth-class knowledge, and practical “how to” tips on life as a knob. The cadet chain of command will test knobs on each piece of required knowledge and record the results in the tracking log in the back of The Guidon. This log and the process associated with it will be one assessment tool that TAC (Teach, Advise, and Coach) process.

The required knowledge will be presented in manageable sizes that correspond to milestones in the fourth-classmen's progression through the year. The milestones are broken down as follows: the end of Challenge Week, the end of Cadre Period, the end of Day. The knowledge progresses from rudimentary information through more complex ideas, and culminates with the cadets becoming familiar with the Leadership into that plan as upperclassmen.

Sexual harassment (SH) is unwelcome conduct of a sexual nature that may occur in person, in writing, and/or through electronic means. It is frequently a display of formal or informal power intended to demean, embarrass, intimidate, or coerce a person of any gender or gender identity. Sexual harassment is frequently found in peer-to-peer harassment. Sexual harassment may consist of repeated behaviors of a sexual nature.

Sexual harassment includes, but is not limited to:

- Domestic violence
- Dating violence
- Lewd or sexually suggestive and/or explicit comments, jokes, or innuendoes
- Sexually demeaning gender-based words or gender-based comments or comments about not conforming to certain genders
- Sexual advances, propositions, or demands of a sexual nature that are not mutually agreeable to both parties
- Questions, comments, or rumors about a person's sexuality or sexual activities
- Sexually obscene messages or spreading rumors distributed via computer, email, phone and/or on social media sites
- Sexually explicit images, text, or cartoons and/or cartoons

The customs of the Corps are the outward government. Outside the old Citadel on Marion Square was a stack of cannon balls. To serve as a link between the old Citadel and the Greater Citadel, as well as representing the artillery, one of the two original courses of military instruction, a stack of cannon balls is located on the bottom of the shank.

Adopted as a part of The Citadel ring, they bind the new college with the spirit and tradition of the old.

VIII. CADET SUPPORT SERVICES

Each company and battalion leader is assigned a "teach, advise, and coach" cadet as they develop as principled leaders, and are the primary integrators of a cadet's leadership development. They also perform a series of functions to connect cadets to the resources they need to be successful.

Each Cadet company is assigned a leader who works closely with the Company TACs and the cadet chain-of-command (primarily the Company leader). These requirements are compatible and that cadets are aware of academic resources and services available to them on the campus.

The leader promotes academic excellence by mentoring and advising cadets in their company and battalion concerning academic performance at The Citadel. These cadets monitor the class absence system as well as the academics of all cadets in the company and battalion, focusing on freshmen, sophomores, and cadets on the team. The leader works with the chain of command to establish an environment conducive to studying and learning by: enforcing the academic standards, providing an opportunity for cadets, (especially freshmen) to mastering their entirety by independent study.

“Customs” do not have the authoritative or prescriptive characteristics of regulations, but they do represent the usual way of acting in given circumstances in a particular society. A military society such as The Citadel has numerous “customs and courtesies” that contribute to good order and discipline as well as add interest, pleasure, and graciousness to life. As a knob you will participate in many customs such as remaining standing as a class to cheer on the team at football games.

“Traditions” are customary patterns of thought, DFWLRQ RU EHKDYLRU KHOG E people that help connect one generation to another. They are usually passed by word of mouth rather than written instruction. The Citadel has its own collective traditions, and individual companies also have their own unit traditions. At The Citadel level, for example, there is a Thanksgiving tradition of a celebratory meal in the Mess Hall, and as knobs, you will contribute to that tradition by making hats for upperclass cadets. At the company level, many individual companies have unique mottos that are a part of their unit tradition.

Customs and traditions are subordinate to and can QHYHU FRQÀLFW ZLWK UHJXODWLRQV are routinely reviewed by the Commandant to ensure consistency with Citadel values. Unfortunately, some cadets occasionally attempt to excuse or justify their deviations from Citadel values and regulations by misidentifying them as customs or traditions. As a NQRE \RX PD\ ¿QG \RXUVHOI GHOL placed in such situations. You should know that there

While The Citadel is in the business of developing leaders, it also recognizes that even leaders have someone that they report to, receive guidance from, and obey the orders of. Self-discipline is the ability to regulate, manage, and hold accountable oneself throughout the process of achieving one's vision, values, and mission. In spite of all the attention they get from upperclass cadets, knobs remain responsible for developing in themselves the discipline necessary to succeed at The Citadel. The DUWL¿FLDO VWUHV RI WKH )RXUW accelerate this process, but it is not designed to sustain it. 7KURXJKRXW WKH FRXUVH RI WKH should rely progressively less on externally-motivated discipline and more on the internally motivated kind. They should develop the disciplined habits of duty, prioritization, obedience, time management, problem-solving, decision-making, and consistency that achieve UHVXOWV 2QO\ E\ WKLV WUDQVLW Pat Conroy (Citadel, 1967) calls the "immortal epigram" that "discipline is the training that makes punishment unnecessary."

At the heart of self-discipline is the ability to subordinate an impulse to a value. As cadets embark on their Citadel experience, they are encouraged to follow Stephen Covey's prescription to "begin with the end in mind" by writing a personal mission statement that focuses on what you want to be and what you want to do, and on the values or principles upon which being and doing are based. This mission statement then becomes the criterion by which you measure everything else in your life. Whenever you discover an inconsistency between your mission statement and your actions, it is self-discipline that restores alignment.

During your counseling sessions with your TAC, you will articulate your near-, mid-, and long-term goals. This exercise will help you decide where you want to go and a plan to get there. Self-discipline will help you follow that plan.

While The Citadel experience will place many demands on your time, you also have other obligations such as to your family and your friends. Do not forget DERXW WKH DQQLYHUVDULHV ELU events in the lives of those who are important people in your life. Add them to your master calendar or planner. You may not be able to participate in person in some of those events, but you will be able to mark them in other ways, even if only by a card, text, or phone call.

Having all your obligations on one document allows you to synchronize your scheduling. You will no doubt ¿QG VRPH ZHHNV RU GD\ V EXVLHU have to plan ahead to accommodate them. You will also ¿QG VRPH SHULRGV WKDW DUH OH use them to absorb some of the spillover from the busier times.

As previously noted, it is always helpful to “begin with the end in mind.” In terms of time management, this is accomplished by the “backwards planning” technique. Begin with the date an event occurs and then work backwards to the present date to assign target completion dates for every interim step. So if a paper is due on a certain date, write that down on your calendar and then work backward to assign dates for when you ZDQW WR KDYH D IULHQG SURRIUH D the bibliography, write your introductory paragraph, go to the library to do your research, write your thesis, meet with your professor to discuss your topic selection, etc. Backwards planning also incorporates the technique of breaking a big task up into manageable pieces that will DOVR KHOS \RX DFFRPSOLVK FRPS appear overwhelming.

.QREV DUH SUHVHQWHG ZLWK D pillar duties. It may be tempting to concentrate on these matters of immediate consequence at the expense of longer-term academic goals. Do not fall victim to this short-sightedness. The military pillar is designed to complement, not compete with, the academic pillar. The skills that contribute to success in the military pillar such as attention to detail, strong work ethic, and procedural compliance are directly transferrable to academic success. Maintain a proper balance between military and academic responsibilities. Both duties must be accomplished, and you will have to make conscious decisions about how to allocate the resources you have available, especially time. As you develop this capability, always reminder that academic success is non-negotiable.

You obviously were a successful high school student or else you would not be here. However, you should XQGHUVWDQG WKDW FROOHJH LV and what made you successful in high school might not EH VXVFLHQW LQ FROOHJH *HQH school you were regularly told what to do and corrected if your behavior did not conform to those instructions. In college you, will be expected to take much more individual responsibility for your actions and you will experience more serious consequences. The Altshuler Learning Enhancement Center at Southern Methodist University has developed a detailed comparison of high school and college that may help you better understand the transition. It is available at <http://www.smu.edu/Provost/ALEC/NeatStuffforNewStudents/+RZ,V&ROOHJH'L uHUHQWIURP+LJK6> college's additional emphasis on student responsibility, The Citadel prides itself on making available all the resources you will need to be academically successful.

Evening Study Period (ESP) begins at 1950 each school night and is a time designated to provide conditions conducive to studying. Quiet is maintained, no meetings or other duties are scheduled, and no upperclass other than those involved in academic tutoring will visit your room. You are required to be in your room, the library, or another approved study area during ESP. While The Citadel can create these conditions to help you, it is up to you. ESP is a study period. It is not a shine period, social period, or a time to take a ten minute study break to prepare your uniform for the next day or call home, and then get back to studying, but if you do not discipline yourself to use ESP for its intended purpose, you will probably soon fall behind.

You have a wide academic support network available to you. Each company has a Cadet Academic Advisor who can connect you with additional resources. He or she should be your first point of contact. Do not wait until the situation worsens. Your Academic Advisor is an important academic pillar, but he or she can also refer you to other resources. Each company and battalion maintains a list of cadet tutors who are available to you. There are also cadets who have the same major as you in your company who will be willing to help you less formally. You will have to maintain the appropriate military bearing, but

There is an old adage that “No one makes it through The Citadel alone.” Your classmates are your teammates and together you will motivate, encourage, assist, and support each other. You will balance out each other’s strengths and weaknesses, and work together to succeed. You will discover the “law of the niche” and with it that everyone can contribute. You will also discover the “law of the weakest link” and with it that the team has a vested interest in helping each of its members. Inevitably there will be a pace. In those cases, “insulate, don’t isolate.” Treat that team member with dignity. Help him develop. Help him to compare yourself with others, “for always there will be greater and lesser persons than yourself.” Square yourself away so you can lead by example and then look for the day when the roles will be reversed.

Part II: Practical Advice

You are no longer a civilian. Certain answers such as “yeah” and “ok” will no longer be part of your vocabulary. “No, sir/ma’am,” “No excuse, sir/ma’am,” “No permission to make a statement, sir/ma’am.” In all communication, you must refer to an upper-class cadet as “Mister . . .” or “Ms . . .”

2. When you receive an order, carry it out to the best of your ability. Arguments are never appropriate. You are expected to obey any legal order by an upper-class cadet.
